Myers’ Summer Travel Fellowship in Otolaryngology for Under-represented Minority Medical Students

This program is sponsored by the American Head and Neck Society and is intended to expose an under-represented minority medical student to the field of Head and Neck surgery specifically and Otolaryngology in general. A grant of $5000 will be awarded to a medical student to cover travel, lodging and food expenses for the summer experience. To apply, click the button below.

Please prepare the following:
- A personal statement, not more than 500 words, detailing why you want this fellowship experience. Please include in the personal statement your underrepresented minority status.
- A copy of your CV
- One Letter of Recommendation

Students must be in good standing at an accredited US medical school. The deadline for submission is January 15, 2019.

Recipients of this travel fellowship award will be expected to engage in a research project with a mentor of their choosing or one of our volunteer mentors from the AHNS. This could be a new project, or an ancillary project nested within an ongoing investigation. At the end of the fellowship, the awardees are expected to provide a summary of their experience in its totality and a brief summary of what they learned and the most impactful experiences throughout the summer. This should include feedback on what worked well and what did not. In addition, the awardees will be required to submit an abstract-like document summarizing their research project including objectives, methods, results and conclusions. Submission to an otolaryngology-related meeting is encouraged but not required and this would be at the discretion of the mentor.
