Dear Family,

Welcome to UCLA’s newly-minted Minority Housestaff Organization! We are thrilled to start this academic year with you and excited for our evolution over this next year.

We hope you enjoy our first quarterly newsletter, meant to celebrate our collective brilliance, beauty and joy. Especially for those who may be onlys in their divisions or departments, our intention is to provide a safe space and launch point for community-building as you start/continue your journey at UCLA.

We welcome any creative ideas about how to improve this newsletter and can’t wait to watch this family grow. Sign up to be an MHO member at ___ - spread the word!

Til next time,
Jennifer Bailey, Manal Khan, Erica Manrriquez and Precious Fortes
(Community and Professional Development Committee)

PS If you are willing to share any personal or professional achievements, please email EManrriquez@mednet.ucla.edu so we can include you in next quarter’s newsletter. No milestone is too small!

FLAVORS OF THE WEEK

Jackfruit Cafe
Located in Sawtelle, @jackfruitcafe is THE place for vegan soul food and is Black-owned to boot. Try the jackfruit soul bowl! (Jennifer)

Simpang Asia
On the corner of National and Rose, @simpangasia packs a punch of flavor with Halal Indonesian cuisine. If you’re looking for some spice wrapped in a banana leaf, this is the spot! (Lovelee)

Badmaash
@badmaashla is a “hip” Indian restaurant in Fairfax that marries eastern flavors and western sensibilities (without diluting the desi-ness). Try the onion fritters, butter chicken samosa, chicken tikka, badmaash fried chicken or chili cheese naan. Wash it down with the oat milk chai! (Manal)
Our Founders

Michael O. Mensah, MD MPH

Michael O. Mensah, MD MPH is from Scranton PA, where he was born to Ghanaian immigrant parents. He attended Princeton University, majoring in Philosophy and African American Studies. He worked at a halfway house before attending UCSF medical school as a PRIME student. He took a year off to attend Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health as a Zuckerman Fellow before finishing medical school to train in Psychiatry at UCLA, where he served as Chief Resident. During residency, he was elected to the American Psychiatric Association Board of Trustees as the only voting trainee member. His research and writing has been featured in the New England Journal of Medicine, JAMA Internal Medicine, Scientific American, and the Journal of General Internal Medicine. He is now a National Clinician Scholar at Yale University, and currently serves as co-editor of Psychiatric Service’s race and mental health column.

Lovelee Brown, MD

Lovelee Brown, MD is a California native who grew up in a first generation, multi-ethnic home that instilled in her the importance of serving others. After a brief adventure on the East Coast for medical school, Lovelee returned to California where she completed her Internal Medicine residency at UCLA, stayed on as Chief Resident and developed the inaugural role of Equity, Diversity and Inclusion Chief Resident for the department of Medicine. With her department’s support, Lovelee synergized with other programs to found and financially ground UCLA’s Minority Housestaff Organization. As a founder she hopes the organization will work to promote the advancement of minority physicians and the communities who produced them.

ManHonors His Farmworker Parents in Special Way After Graduating Medical School: 'Victory Lap'

After earning his M.D., Erick Juarez returned to the farm where his parents, Loreto and Maricela, have worked since immigrating to the U.S. from Mexico.

Check out Neurology intern Erick Juarez's feature in People Magazine about honoring his family through his work.

Emergency Medicine R2 Reza Hessabi's reflections on the last year are highlighted in August's UCLA Health newsletter.

A year like no other

Dartmouth Medicine

"Prior to starting medical school, I made sure I had access to mental health resources, and I'm lucky to be in a program where residents have access to those resources," said Reza Hessabi, second-year resident in the UCLA-Ronald Reagan/Olive View Emergency Medicine Residency Program.
